friendsVentUnlike Crewmates, Imposters can move around many maps by jumping in and out of small, grey vents-grille on the floor. You can hide in this because you decide which room to go to the next, but your sabotage and kill cooldowns will pause while you exit sight. Before hitting out of the hole, have to wait a few seconds to see which Crewmates are nearby—you want to avoid appearing in front of them and giving yourself away. Looks busy As Imposter, your objective is to task and choose Crewmates, but you need to have a backup task in mind to help you combine with the rest of the team. Select several tasks you can claim that you've worked between meetings so you're ready to send them again with confidence, when interrogated. This is a solid strategy Among Us, but it also helps if you are good both. Remember that you can't turn off visual tasks, though—that's one way to acknowledge you're Imposter immediately. Head to the terminal and pause for a few seconds to make it look as if you continue your job too. Others will watch, and a good Crewmates will highlight those who don't finish the task in meetings. After you play for a few hours, you'll see ways in which you can build a convincing defense, while seizing opportune moments to pin blame others. (Image credit: Innersloth) Sabotage! Turn off the lights, break down the Reactor, and the paddle door is just a few ways that you can slow down Crewmates and murder orchestrate. There is a cooldown after performing sabotage events, so plan ahead and think about how you can target players and go quickly afterwards. Killing close to the lohat provides you with an escape route, but consider locking Crewmate in a room with you to prevent them from leaving, or someone else entering and witnessing the attack. Turn off the lights blocking Crewmates' vision to help you commit quick murder, even others close, before you skip to other parts of the ship. You can also trigger sabotage events that require Crewmates to correct machinery, and then fix it yourself to appear innocent. Watch out for CameraCrewmates using security cameras to check others. While it is better to avoid murder given the camera at all, sometimes you only have a few seconds to seize your chances. Thankfully, you can tell when the security camera is active because it will display a red, blinking light. Even killing from various security cameras, if you realize that someone is watching the area, it is necessary to take steps to keep you through the motion of entering and leaving the room normally. (Image credit: Innersloth) Report someone else's beliefs can be challenging, but you can try to draft an innocent Crewmate by reporting the body of the player you have killed. This strategy is definitely risky and can easily backfire if other Crewmates are already dubious. However, if you've played carefully until this point and have managed to get others to clean you up in previous meetings, hide in the square square can work surprisingly well. Similarly, if you realize that crews suspect innocent players, report their current body easily close to helping you build persuading cases against them, and removing you from the line out. Coordinating with Other ImpostersThis Among U.S. strategies is hard to draw, but it can end the game quickly. If you're in a match where there are some Imposters, be sure to keep an eye on what they're up to. You may not be able to talk to them, but you can find out what their intentions might be based on the sabotage they started, as well as their movements and positions on the map. Operating separately ensures you will each have a different Crewmate alibi, but you can guarantee each other, providing your story is reasonable. By the end of the match, when some Crewmates were abandoned, or when they might be close to completing all tasks, collaborating with other Imposter could close the game quickly. Choosing a sabotage that benefits you both, such as turning off lights, can lead to double murder. This ensures you make the most of your time between cooldowns. cooldowns.
